

Second-Year Review Meeting Guidelines (for students)

When meeting with a second-year review adviser, you may want to consider the following questions. (These questions are intended for directing and focusing discussion and need not be answered in writing.)

1. How would you characterize your areas of intellectual interest?
2. What relation do you see between your accomplished course work and your qualifying exam?
3. What historical fields are you leaning toward?
4. Are there skills or areas of expertise, beyond the required coursework and languages already completed, that might be important to your proposed historical fields and areas of interest?
5. Do you have in mind particular faculty members in our department with whom you would like to work?
6. Have you developed a working relationship with any faculty outside of our department?
7. Are there fellowships for which you are qualified to apply?
8. Are there prizes for which you might be eligible to compete?
